NATIONAL WHIG NOMINATIONS.

FOR PRESIDENT, GENERAL WINFIELD SCOTT,

OF NEW JERSEY. FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

WILLIAM A. GRAHAM, OF NORTH CAROLINA.

"I HAVE SERVED THE UNION FOR FORTY-ODD YEARS, AND FEEL MYSELF A CITIZEN OF EVERY OF IT; AND WHATEVER OF LIFE AND STRENGTH I MAY HAVE SHALL BE DEVOTED TO ITS PRESERVATION. "-Gen. Winfield Scott's Castle Garden Speech.

Adjustment of the Fishery Difficulty. We are enabled to announce upon what we regard as entirely satisfactory authority that the subject of the recent excitement in regard to the New England fisheries has been arranged between Mr. Webster and Mr. Crampton in a manner that will prove wholly satisfactory to the American people.

The Senate and the Census.

The proceedings of the United States Senate yesterday, with reference to the compensation of the Superintendent of the Census, were of a most extraordinary character, and, when rightly understood by the public, will be regarded with indignation, if not with incredulity.

The remarks of Messrs, Dawson and BELL as reported in the Globe of this morning, reflect infinite honor upon these gentlemen, and will afford a fair insight to the merits of the case.

In what the Superintendent has offended we are totally at a loss to understand : but it is evident that there is excited against him a most unprecedented and vindictive opposition on the part of a few persons, whose concerted movements of late are chiefly characterized by a system of well-studied strategy, as vigilant as it is unaccountable in the inciting motives leading to it.

We have to-day been at some pains to obtain a statement of the facts in this case, which we in part derive from a brief prepared by Mr. KENNEDY, and which would have shed much light on the subject had the matter been brought up at any other time than at the precise moment of the absence of a large number of the members of the Senate, and especially of those who might be presumed to be disposed to defend the assailed party.

It appears that by a law of Congress, in 1849, a Census Board was established to prepare a plan for taking the Seventh Census. Of that board, (composed of the Secretary of State, Attorney General, and Postmaster General,) Mr. J. C. G. Kennedy was appointed secretary. The Board decided upon the plan which was submitted to Congress in December, 1849. Governor Davis took exception to the plan proposed, but was unfortunate in his efforts to effect any material change in the details, and they remained substantially as the board perfected them. Governor Davis was chairman of the committee to propose a bill to provide for taking the census. The Census Board formally requested him to provide for paying the salary of their secretary; this he declined to do in fact, although he had, at the request of the the copies of the portrait intended for presentaboard, promised that he would do it; but he reported the bill without any such provision, or any allusion to the board or its secretary. This lation. bill was read, -(Senate Bill No. 76, 1st Sess. 31st Cong.) It provides that the preparatory printing shall be executed by direction of the Secretary of Capitol than Welch's portrait of Washington. the Interior, by contract to the lowest bidder, We have heard many of the Senators and memafter ten days' notice. It was detected, as the bers of the House express themselves in the journal of proceedings show, that Mr. Davis had highest possible terms of this beautiful portrait omitted all provision for the salary of the secre- since its deposite in the Capitol. tary of the board, leaving him without any com phraseology which characterizes it—giving to the great national work.

a year to the government service. Thus the bill went to the House of Representatives, and was referred to the Judiciary Committee, which suggested many important alterations, and among others struck from the bill all the provisions of the Senate respecting the printing, and inserted a clause continuing the board, which was required to go on and do the preparatory printing-in fact, all the printing, till Congress should direct respecting the printing of the Compilation. This amendment was adopted in the Senate: and with this provision continuing the Board, the bill became a law the 23d May, 1850. This was only eight days previous to that day with reference to impossible for the census to commence then, and the subject would say otherwise. It did not commence till long after the passage of the bill, as marshals throughout the country, to the number and instructions sent. In fact, in the District of of the Republic. Columbia, surrounding the office, it was months before the work could begin, and the census was not taken even here till September, and the returns were made the 18th November. The preliminary organization was tremendous, and Congress was subsequently compelled, on the 30th August following, to extend the time in certain portions of the country. Mr. Kennedy was appointed Superintendent of the Census June 1. 1850, up to which date he received $3,000 salary. At the close of the month the disbursing agent paid him a salary at the rate of $2,500. Mr. Kennedy received it, but objected, and submitted it to the Secretary of the Interior and the board, who suggested that all that would be necessary to entitle him to recover the $3,000 would be to procure the certificate of the board that he was still in their employ.

This was obtained, and is dated July 1, 1850, carrying, in itself, sufficient proof that he, at the expiration of his first month, claimed the higher salary, which he had previously received: it could be of no other use, and was designed for hood. this purpose alone. Shortly after this, and before the recurrence of a pay-day, the change occurred in the Cabinet, and the Department of the Interior was without any permanent chief for some time

The matter was submitted to Mr. McKennon. who declared Mr. Kennedy entitled to the highest salary. He, however, did not remain in the department a sufficient length of time to carry into effect the order. Thus it was when Mr. Stuart entered the department. He found Mr. Kennedy to have received, for discharging the one duty, salary at the rate of $3,000 per annum, until the disbursing agent assumed the responsibility of curtailing it, while Mr. Kennedy was protesting. Without hesitation, after an examination of the subject, and finding Mr. Kennedy discharging the two duties, he very properly ordered him to be paid the highest salary. This was paid for a time, and then the order disobeyed-an order upon which Mr. Kennedy might have insisted, and might now; but the disbursing agent had formally applied to the board for extra compensation above his regular salary, and, this being referred to Mr. Kennedy, he had denied the right of Mr. Williamson, under the law, to receive it. And here appears an inconsistency in Mr. Williamson's conduct, inasmuch as he solicited of the board extra compensation, while, in a letter to the Comptroller, he argues that the board did not exist at the time.

Under all these circumstances, the Secretary of the Interior applies to Congress to make the matter plain. According to his written desire, this was done by changing the phraseology of the clause before alluded to, and making it prospective, conditionally. This was done with a full knowledge of its practical effect in the committee of the Senate, and adopted by that body. The bill was sent to the House, referred to the Judiciary Committee, and adopted, with the understanding that it would give to Mr. Kennedy the $3,000 for his past services; and thus it became a law. On Thursday last Mr. Kennedy sent to the members of the Senate a temperately written review of a report of the Committee on the Census, of which Mr. Davis was a member. The same day that honorable Senator introduced a "joint resolution" explanatory of the former bill, entirely altering its construction, and neutralizing its present effects-asserting that Mr. Kennedy under that law had demanded, "as I am informed," two salaries. Thus was this resolution introduced under a false statement, or a misrepresentation was to be put into requisition to carry it. Without much thought, and in the presence of a few Senators, the resolution was ordered forthwith, without any notice to the party interested and maligned, to be engrossed. The next morning Judge Mangum moved a reconsideration, which carried; and he prepared himself with all the facts necessary to expose the whole transaction. Yesterday, unfortunately, Mr. Mangum was confined by indisposition to his room; and while the Senate was almost deserted, and there was scarce a single Senator present who had looked into the subject, and against all remonstrance, and that courtesy we believe never before refused, the Senator from Massachusetts pressed the original resolution to its final pas-

There are other facts connected with this matter, to which we may recur at a future day. We know too well the character of the House of Representatives to believe that that body will permit a resolution of this nature to be hurried through, and we feel sure that that popular branch of Congress will not suffer the individual rights of an officer and citizen to be contravened by feelings of personal malice and unsatisfied re-

Too much praise cannot be awarded to the genius of the artist, and enterprise of the publisher, who have placed within the reach and sight of all a positive likeness of the immortal Washington. We sincerely trust that Congress will duly appreciate this fact, and see in this triumph of American art just cause for a proper testimonial of its regard.

It has been a source of extreme regret, that but one really correct likeness of Washington existed, and that that was in the possession of a literary institution.

It is a pity that but a limited and, in comparion to the demand, a small number of this great work can possibly be obtained even from a steel which the census was to be taken. It was utterly plate; and it is quite as probable that Mr. Welch would fail to produce a repetition of his great no one who has any adequate understanding of engraving, as did Stuart to produce an exact copy of his great original.
